

In 2005 I graduated from the University of Calgary with a B.Sc. in Computer Science and a concentration in computer game programming. I then pursued game development at Electronic Arts, an opportunity that gave me ample experience dealing with very large organizations and software systems, supporting and extending legacy systems, and communicating effectively across multiple teams.

My career as a web developer began in 2007 at Gossamer Threads where I learned the classic LAMP stack. In 2011 I became the first employee, as a software developer, at Unbounce. During my time there I contributed to improving their technical development process, building and maintaining developer tools, designing and improving application infrastructure, maintaining and improving software quality, and assisted with interviewing, hiring and performance evaluations.

Currently I'm a technical team lead and senior software developer at Lendesk where I've been working to design, plan, and build features and integrations, improve the development processes, reduce technical debt, and help the members of my team to learn and grow in their careers as software professionals.

Attached is my résumé, which includes an additional summary of my professional experience. A complete summary of my careers is available at <https://www.groovestomp.com/about/>. I look forward to your response.

Sincerely,

Aaron Oman
